

Career Quest in Seattle with the Best Group

I was so excited with this opportunity to visit these fancy company in Seattle. As a computer science major, I am interested in seeking a career in technology company. To be honest, Seattle is the best place to work. It is a constantly growing and progressing city which is the hub for tech companies. The job opportunity here is pretty much more than DC.

This trip was a great chance for me to realize myself deeply and gave me an opportunity to feel those tech companies and think which is better to me. In total, we visited six companies including Starbucks, Milliman, Gates Foundation and big tech companies such as Microsoft, Facebook and Amazon. In this trip, not only you can visit their office and headquarter but also you can sit down there and have a great talk with current employee and ask them the questions you want to know. Each company provided me a new experience about their culture and work environment. My favorite was Facebook, when I visited their office, a thought appearing in my head which said that the place over there is for me.

The best part of this trip was the people. Not only the students that I met on this trip were interesting, diverse, outgoing, but the employees, organizers, and alumni were so kind and impressive. They were happily to share stories and experience to us and I was strongly inspired of them. At the alumni event, I had a lot of interesting conversations with different Alumni who live here in Seattle. They gave me some advices from different view and position for my future career. It was very helpful to me. Besides, I become more confident during the conversations with employees.

The trip was not only memorable, it was also meaningful. At the end of each day, we had some down time to get in touch the city and relax. It made me love this city and people here, also I knew that it will give me more opportunity in future. The weather those days in Seattle may be not perfect, but this career quest trip was. I was very appreciative that I have this opportunity to be a member of this wonderful trip with these talented people.
